

OCTOBER 2018

goodmanproperty.co.nz

10 Savill Drive comes to life

10 Savill Drive is under construction with completion expected in December 2018. But don't let that stop you experiencing the real thing, with our scale model accurately detailing the new building.

Our model maker is a young man named Jason Gillard, an autistic person with a passion for model making. We have employed Jason to create scale models that we can use in the marketing of our developments. This is his first industrial building and it's an outstanding result. I'm sure you're all impressed with the detail and finish that has been achieved. Working part-time for the last 10 weeks Jason has interpreted plans and built the model using a variety of materials including cardboard, aluminium and plastic. The roof can be removed to view the warehouse interior and the roller doors work too!

Working part-time for the last 10 weeks Jason has interpreted plans and built the model using a variety of materials including cardboard, aluminium and plastic.

Learn more about Jason Gillard at <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OlfsPEdR3G4>

Jason working with Mark on the design.

Goodman staff viewing the completed model.

Jason has worked from his home workshop and even has a special tool, built by his father and some friends, that accurately profiles aluminium sheets for the cladding and roof. A site visit with Goodman's Project Manager Mark Thompson, helped Jason understand the construction process and allowed him to refine the model. Mark's guidance also helped Jason better understand the use of scale when interpreting drawings.

Goodman were introduced to Jason through Karen Cooper of Poly-Emp, an employment & advisory service for people with learning difficulties. It's an organisation that helps those with disabilities find paid employment, allowing them to reach their full potential. Jason is justifiably proud of what he has achieved and we're really excited to have him working for us as he pursues his passion.

Left to right: Jason Gillard, Mark Thompson and Karen Cooper on site at 10 Savill Drive, Otahuhu

Attention to detail and accuracy are outstanding.